Corn Griffin Road Paving Debate Gains Momentum by Tom Wynn

The battle over Corn Griffin Road resurfaced at the August City Commission Meeting. , as residents demanded, with all respect, of course, action on the city's last unpaved road. Recent rains have turned the stretch into a muddy hazard, prompting renewed calls for safety improvements.

Some residents floated the idea of handing the road over to Gulf County, hoping the county might have more resources to address the issue. Others backed a modest gas tax proposed by Commissioner Charley Pettis as a way to fund paving without draining the city's budget.

"Every rainstorm turns our road into a mud pit — we continue asking the city to pave it for safety." — Corn Griffin Road Resident stated in the meeting.

Corn Griffin Road residents sent their community representative to speak for them. In the August City Meeting, pressing officials to finally pave the city's last remaining dirt road. After heavy rains, the road becomes a muddy mess, riddled with potholes and erosion — a growing safety concern for families, school buses, and delivery drivers.

Despite years of requests, the city has yet to prioritize the project. Some residents now suggest removing the road from city jurisdiction altogether, hoping Gulf County might step in. A neighborhood representative formally raised the idea, saying county control could open the door to new funding and faster action.

City Engineer and County Commissioner Jack Husband confirmed that no state grant money is currently available, leaving the city without a clear path forward. Budget constraints and competing priorities continue to stall progress. Commissioner Charley Pettis floated a small gas tax as a potential funding source. While no vote was taken, the proposal sparked discussion as a possible way to move the project ahead.

Council members acknowledged the concerns but offered no timeline. Residents left the meeting still asking — politely but firmly — for the city to pave Corn Griffin Road and make safety a priority. TW

Natural Foods That Clean Out the Gut

by Grandpa Tom

Sometimes our stomachs just don't feel right. Maybe it's too much fried mullet, or one plate too many of Grandma's biscuits and honey. Luckily, God gave us food right here in Florida to keep things running smoothly.

Papaya – The Tropical Tummy Helper

Papaya works like a gentle mechanic for your stomach. Eat a ripe one with a squeeze of lime in the morning, and you'll feel lighter before the rooster crows twice. Some folks even chew the seeds, but that's for the brave.

Aloe Vera – Don't Just Rub It On

The clear gel inside aloe leaves can be blended into juice. Avoid the green skin – it's bitter! Aloe soothes the stomach and keeps things moving naturally.

Okra – Nature's Broom

Sticky okra sweeps your intestines clean. My Grandma wasn't bigger than a minute, but she said, "Eat your okra, and you won't need a plumber."

Citrus – Sunshine in a Peel

Here in Wewa, citrus is part of our history. About 75 to 100 years ago, we were the capital of the citrus industry, and today our trees are richer than ever. Oranges, grapefruits, and lemons freshen the digestive tract. Start your day with lemon water – it's like flushing the system with sunshine. Now if I can only remember that! Hmmm…

I asked Daddy Doc one day, "How did you live so long?" (He was 96, lived to 101.) He said, "The closer you get your food from the ground to your mouth, the longer you will live." He was talking about his garden, of course. I loved that man. We shared laughs about our younger days and the Bible in local restaurants. I look forward to seeing him again in heavenly places.

Greens, Sweet Potatoes & Ribeye – Country Cooking

Collards, mustard greens, and kale keep your gut happy. Sweet potatoes are gentle yet effective. Sweet potato and a ribeye with a green salad is my favorite at local eateries – though I get fussed at when I add brown sugar. Shzzz!

Coconut Water – God's Gatorade

Crack open a coconut, sip the water, and enjoy the meat. When I was a 7-year-old boy in Dinner Key, Florida, I'd climb coconut trees, break them open on the street, and eat the fresh meat. Yummy! I didn't know then that the water was good too, but God designed it for us.

Local Honey – Sweet Health

Eat local honey for your health and to help with allergies. Just a spoonful of a day can make a difference.

A Neighborly Tip

Try papaya in the morning, some greens at dinner, and keep lemon water handy. Your gut will thank you!

Here in Wewa, we're lucky to have Florida's bounty around the corner. Enjoy these foods, share a smile with a neighbor, and your body – and your heart – will thank you!
